Ruth Lee manikins for fire, ambulance, military and security services are indispensable tools worldwide.

The range is the result of years of research and development and is characterized by extreme durability. It's tough enough to be buried by concrete or steel supports, run over by a vehicle, or withstand a fall from the second floor.

The variety of uses ranges from firefighting, technical assistance, rescue from heights and depths, from collapsed buildings to spatially limited emergencies and much more. The flexible core made of a granulate filling imitates the human weight. With its realistic proportions, the Ruth Lee training manikin is a real game changer and takes your training to the next level. Improve your skills and test hand holds in a realistic environment. Be well prepared for real emergency situations to save lives!

The doll can be used in areas with a temperature of up to 100 °C, but must not come into contact with direct fire or an immediate heat source.
